SMUTS MEDIATOR
TWIXT NORTH AND
SOUTH IN IRELANDSTATESMAN WILL OFFER
SERVICES IN SETT-
LING DIFFERENCES.ACTION PLEASING
Skill of South African Premier as Peacemaker Big Factor.

[By Associated Press.]
London.—General Jan Smuts, South African premier, is expected to leave London for Ireland early next week, probably Monday, to place his services at the disposal of both Sinn Féin and the regular Irish leader, Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, during their critical consideration of the Irish peace proposals, made by Premier Lloyd George.

In circles which are closely observing the developments of the Irish situation, much satisfaction is expressed at the prospect of General Smuts re-entire into the negotiations. This is particularly the case in view of the persistent reports that the British prime minister's offer, submitted to Dr. De Valera Thursday, includes a plan for dominion home rule for Ireland on the lines of the South African constitution. Concerning the workings of this form of government, General Smuts is able to give information of the greatest value.

Perhaps even more important, in the view of many students of the situation, is General Smuts' reputed influence as a mediator due to his former position as one of the anti-English leaders in the South African war. This is held by those observers, who established a common bond between the Southern Irish leaders and General Smuts which renders his advice more acceptable to them than that of all others.

Before Premier Smuts projected trip to Dublin it is expected Mr. De Valera will have submitted the British prime minister's proposals to the Irish republican parliament or at least have canvassed the situation with the Sinn Féin leaders.

DUBLIN IS HOPEFUL OF SETTLEMENT SOON

[By Associated Press.]
Dublin.—The impression is growing here that the Irish peace offer, made by Premier Lloyd George, will be accepted by the Sinn Féin leader, who will work out a settlement. The terms of the offer are still being held in the strictest confidence. The outstanding feature of the government's offer is the concession of fiscal autonomy, it was said on high authority here Saturday.

The position of Ulster is amply secured.

NEXT MOVE TO COME FROM SOUTH IRELAND

[By Associated Press.]
London.—With Sinn Féin back in Dublin, British circles Saturday apparently had settled down to await the next move in the Irish peace negotiations, which are expected to take place in the near future.

Two important points which seem to have considerable bearing on the negotiations are first, whether another meeting between Sir James Craig, premier of Ulster, and Dr. De Valera can be arranged in Ireland, and second, whether an amendment to the present home rule act would be satisfactory to the Irish republicans.

A supplementary statement, covering the entire negotiations is expected to be made by Mr. Lloyd George in the house of commons next week.

MERCHANTS SECURE

Sprinkling of the streets in the business district in this daytime, charging the merchants for it, was discussed in a conference held by a committee of the merchants with Mayor Thomas E. Welch at 10:30 a. m. Monday. The retailers recently petitioned the city council requesting that the practice be stopped on the grounds that it was "inefficient and expensive," but the matter was laid upon the table for a future meeting.

MATERNITY BILL
PASSES SENATE"Better Baby" Measure Meets
Scant Opposition in Upper House.

[By Associated Press.]
Washington.—By a vote of 53 to 7, the senate late Friday passed the Sheppard-Towner "better baby" bill. The bill establishes a system of cooperation between the federal and state governments for the development of birth hygiene, its administration is placed in the children's bureau of the department of labor.

An annual appropriation of $180,000 is carried in the bill, $10,000 to be paid to each state. Another $1,000,000 is provided for the fiscal year, to be apportioned among the states in proportion which their population bears to the population of the country.

Opponents of the bill, who have been fighting it on the ground that it is a birth-control measure, made persistent efforts to render it innocuous by offering amendments after amendments. All failed save one, offered by Senator Reed of Missouri, which prohibits administrative officers of the act from entering homes or taking charge of children over the objections of the parents.

Senator Moses of New Hampshire proposed transferring the administration of the bill from the secretary of the treasury to the secretary of the interior, but the senate decided, 61 to 2, that finance has nothing to do with birth-control.

Reed was voted ironic. Three republicans and four Democrats voted against the bill on the final roll call. The republicans were: Borah, Idaho; Moses, New Hampshire; and Warren, Wyoming. The Democrats: Broussard, Louisiana; King, Utah; Reed, Missouri; and Watson, Georgia.

When the result was announced, Senator Reed, one of the bitterest foes of the measure, offered an amendment to change its title to read: "A bill to create a board of spinners to teach the mothers of the United States how to raise babies." The proposal was howled down.

SGT. JONES QUIT
POLICE WORK HEREDay Desk Man Leaves Monday
After Four Years'
Faithful Service.

Desk Sergeant Harvey M. Jones, member of the police department for more than four years, handed in his resignation Saturday to take effect Monday.

Officer Charles Handy, day relief man who has had considerable experience on the desk job, will succeed him, it was announced by Chief Charles Newman.

Mr. Jones handed his resignation to John E. Kennedy, secretary of the police and his commission. It is expected that it will be accepted.

No trouble with Newman. The retiring sergeant stated that he had been considering his resignation for more than three months and denied that the change in the head of the department had anything to do with his action. Mr. Jones is not prepared to announce his plans for the future but intends to remain in Janesville.

Mr. Jones said he was offered another place on the department as a plain clothes man but declined to accept.

"There has been no difficulty between myself and Mr. Jones," stated Chief Newman. "His resignation was entirely voluntary and came unexpectedly to me."

Although there was no trouble between SGT. Jones and the retiring sergeant, it is stated that no doubt would have continued on the department had Mr. Morrissey been allowed to continue as chief. It may be necessary to add a new man to take Handy's place. Former Chief Morrissey is now doing night patrol duty.

When the mob came to the jail, the sheriff, a deputy and the jailer were sitting on the rear steps. They refused to turn over the keys to the mob leaders, whereupon the mob broke down the jail doors and five other intervening doors. The prisoner, however, put up a stiff fight, slashing two of the mob with a razor before he was overpowered.

An attempt to lynch Jones the night following the crime under which he was convicted was frustrated.

INSURE SAFE CONDUCT.

[By Associated Press.]
Paris.—Premier Briand, following a meeting of the council of ministers at Rambouillet, Friday, has dispatched a telegram to Berlin, requesting that the German government take all necessary steps to insure safe conduct through Germany of a new division of French troops which will be ordered to Silesia within a few hours.

Saturday morning's newspapers give considerable prominence to the council meeting, the second to be held at Rambouillet since the election of President Millerand. It is understood the Silesian question was the chief subject under discussion, and, although the official communiqué fails to say so, the newspapers declare unqualified approval.

The ministers are reported to feel that France should not retreat an inch from the determination to send reinforcements to Upper Silesia, despite opposition by Lloyd George, British premier.

Instructions were sent late Friday night to the French ambassador in London, requesting him to tell the British government that France considers it useless for the allies to establish a Silesian boundary without providing sufficient troops to enforce the provisions, adding that France intends to send other division without waiting for action by other allies.

Auto Repairing Plant Puts in More Equipment

With the installation of a cylinder grinder, the plant of the Automotive Machine & Tool company, East Milwaukee street, has become one of the finest auto repair plants in the city. Del Harder, manager, has greatly enlarged his place since moving there a short time ago.

The automotive company is specializing on general auto repairing and complete overhauling. Mr. Harder declares that he is seeking to establish a reputation for expert work.

The agency for the Auburn car is held by the Automotive people. Manufacture of the Auburn has been developed by Morris Eckert who for 40 years has been in the carriage and wagon business. He started making the Auburn in 1899 on a policy of giving the best motor car.

It is possible in a medium priced car. The Auburn company was one of the first to promote welfare plans among its employees, permitting them to purchase an interest in the plant on the belief that a satisfied worker turns out a better product.

Manager Harder, formerly with the Samson Tractor company, has had considerable experience as an automobile mechanic with such firms as the Cadillac, Studebaker and Chevrolet people.

Carp Royally Welcomed Home to Gay Parade

Paris—Georges Carpentier, apparently more than ever the idol of the French sporting public, because of his gallant unsuccessful attempt to capture the world's heavyweight championship, was given a hero's reception upon his arrival in Paris at 10 a. m. Saturday from the United States.

The railway station was crowded as Carpentier appeared. He was cheered by the surrounding crowd and borne through the side door of the station and along the Rue Londres.

Several doors and windows were crushed in by the pressure of the throng which choked the streets.

Police asked Carpentier politely to make the rest of his journey home in a taxi-cab so that the crowd would disperse.

Carpentier will return to the United States early next fall.

BOXING ARENA IS CHURCH ON SUNDAY

New York.—A boxing arena in Seaside, Rockaway, Long Island, is serving as a place of worship for thousands of Catholic summer vacationists.

The Rev. Joseph B. Brady, pastor of the parish, obtained permission to use the arena when he learned the Catholics in the summer colony numbered more than 15,000.

The church of St. Catharine could not seat so many even though seven masses were held each Sunday.

And now, after the fistie encounter.

TO CONTINUE FIGHT FOR P. O. ADDITION

New Bill to be Put Before Congress in December, Belief.

Another bill for the appropriation of funds to build an addition to the Janesville post office will probably be introduced in congress at the opening of the regular session in December so that it may be included in the annual postal appropriation bill. Postmaster Cunningham stated Friday following a visit here of A. A. Packard, supervising architect of the Chicago district of post-offices, that Mr. Packard made the first survey here in 1916 for an addition to the postoffice at that time. He inspected the building thoroughly, finding the available space for handling mail inadequate, and said he would report this to the department.

$125,000 Was Asked.

In the bill introduced in Congress two years ago by former Congressman Clifford S. Randall an appropriation of $125,000 was asked to build an addition to the alley, which would conform with the present style of architecture. This it is believed by Mr. Packard and Mr. Cunningham would be adequate at the present time.

Since the first survey was made here in 1916 to ask for an addition to the building, business has almost doubled. Figures given by Postmaster Cunningham show that the annual business done in 1916 was $71,000 and in 1920, $124,000. This leads the officials to believe that the request for an appropriation will meet with favor.

Plan New Delivery.

Mr. Packard will draw up plans to change the driveway for mail trucks, which at the present time runs from the alley off Dodge street up to the platform. This has proved too small for traffic. It is now planned to construct a special driveway directly off Dodge street running up through postoffice property parallel with the building to the platform. This was recommended by Major Haverstick, postal inspector who was here recently.

At Chicago—Fond du Lac was selected as the next convention city of the Wisconsin County Clerks' association, in session here. Harry Cassinger, Racine, was elected president, and V. P. Rach, Antigo, treasurer.

"Honey" Most Overworked Word in Dictionary, Says College Grad, Working Behind Counter

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Kansas City, Mo.—With the idea of some day becoming a department store official, Miss Elizabeth Boyd, a recent Smith college graduate, is working behind the counter in a downtown store here, selling everything from frying pans to hooks and eyes.

It's hard work, Miss Boyd says, but thoroughly interesting. And she is learning not only the stock and business itself, but the human side of it as well. For none of her associates knows that she is there on any different footing than they are.

"Some of them were inclined not to have much to do with me at first," says Miss Boyd, "but I found the road to their hearts when I began reading the girls' palms for them during the lunch hour. And now I have more heart problems to solve than Laura Jean Libby."

Another discovery Miss Boyd has made is that "honey" is the most overworked word in the English language in department store circles. All the girls in her store "honey" each other and "honey" the customers, and a considerable number of the customers "honey" them in return.

"It is perfectly amazing," she said, "to discover how many of them in this place have been married and divorced before they are 15. Love affairs are the one great topic of conversation and interest among many department store girls here, and the fact that one husband has turned out badly is no discouragement."

"I like them, and I've made a lot of friends, but you'd be surprised to find how few I know who have any idea of staying with their work or rising in it. With a whole lot of them it's simply a matter of holding a job until they can get married, or until they can save up enough to get a divorce, as it seems."

SPECIAL DELIVERY MAIL INCREASE TO 25 CENTS PROBABLE

Although the revenue of the Janesville postoffice would be increased by $25,000 flowing on a basis of 1920 sales Postmaster J. J. Cunningham is skeptical concerning the report that the price of special delivery stamps may be raised soon from 10 cents to 25.

The Janesville postoffice does a large business in special delivery stamps. In the fiscal year of 1920 which ended June 30, 1921 the Janesville office sold $12,950 worth of special delivery stamps and delivered 26,723 special delivery letters.

Postmaster Cunningham expressed himself as being against a raise as he feared the business would be greatly reduced. The government at the present time makes two cents clear profit on each message. Eight cents of the ten goes to the messenger. In 1920 $1,550.55 was paid for messenger service here. Telegraph messengers are employed here.

"I believe that many people would use the telegraph who now use the special delivery service were rate increased to 25 cents," said Mr. Cunningham. "Although this would probably be much more expensive yet the service which one gets is much quicker."

MAYOR ADVOCATES CITY PURCHASE OF LAND FOR MEMORIAL

Purchasing land by the city and donating it for the site of a community memorial building is favored by Mayor Thomas E. Welsh. In conference with Lucian O. Holman, manager of the local Chamber of Commerce, Tuesday, the mayor stated that he did not think it advisable to give any of the land owned by the city, according to Mr. Holman. The community memorial building committee had suggested that the city plot on North Jackson street, across from the city hall, be given for the structure. Mr. Holman states that the mayor said this was to be used for a fire station.

Further conference on the matter will be held before any action is taken.

"One Man in a Million"

No matter if your heart is in your boots, this picture will find it. In the sordid surroundings of a dog pound Lupino Delchini found Romanche. A clear, clean picture you will thoroughly enjoy.

Note from the Manager

After viewing the excellent production "One Man in a Million" at the Tivoli Theatre in Chicago, I was surprised to see George Beban appear personally on the stage and make the following statement to the audience. First in a broken Italian dialect he said: "I am George Beban who have appeared as an Italian character in many productions." Then in very clear English he said: "I am here to announce that I have produced under my own name several productions which have been financial failures because of the high moral type of the picture which type our patrons have failed to support. I am personally very enthused and interested in the advancement of the film industry and am scheduled to appear in all the leading theatres in the country before you, ladies and gentlemen, and plead for your support to the cleaner and higher moral type productions."

Mrs. Zanias and myself interviewed Mr. Beban personally after his talk and he was highly pleased at our attitude on the subject and that we approved his efforts to uplift the morals of the motion picture industry.

With this thought in mind Mr. Beban produced the picture, "One Man in a Million," and it is with great pleasure that we present it to our patrons Tuesday and Wednesday.

KLEATH

By Madge Macbeth

But Kleath, musing over her diamond bracelet, the tip of her tongue, offered to chaperone and assist Goldie in her work of mercy. So Tim Meadows, who in Kleath and Goldie's hands had been a miser, was now a benefactor. Kleath, with his warm Irish heart, soon developed a passion for trying to show his gratitude to these friends by the disposal of his few earthly possessions and by the bequest of what could not be actually carried away.

At the end of a very few days, nothing but his bare walls remained and Kleath was the only incumbent who had not been provided for.

"Don't think of worryin' my head about that boy," Barney said with relief to Goldie. "It was the others that were givin' me sleepless nights. I don't mind tellin' you, Goldie, that I've left Chris everything else I've got, includin' my claim. Soon as the ice breaks, I'm going up to take out the amount the government requires and then I'll make my report. I'll get the thing started as Chris can finish it."

"But Barney," Goldie protested, "you must not talk and think of leaving us. You are getting better, aren't you? What else do you suppose I have been taking of you all these days for?"

He patted her affectionately.

"You are a wonderful nurse, Goldie Meadows. Feelin' better? Bless your heart, Goldie, I could fight me with you in a minute."

He was better, certainly, but it is doubtful whether without unusual incentive he would have made effort to shake off his paralyzing weakness. Cleveland finished the incentive with this news:

"In view of the fact that smuggling has become prevalent throughout the creek, our respected citizen, T. Meadows, Esquire, has definitely decided to open a Refreshment Pavilion at Extravaganza two weeks from Saturday next."

"Sure an' it's Barney for that bar-becue!" said Barney's small, excited voice.

Clara Meredith stood at her slightly frosted window one pale-gold afternoon and watched for Delany, who usually dropped in for tea. He was by no means insensible to the attraction of his hostess, nor was he ignorant of his cause.

He ran up the steps with an im-

SOME HARMFUL HABITS

One woman said once upon a time that when she considered the number of dangers that children ran into every day, she wondered that any of them ever grew up. It is the same with people about good looks. And when one considers the number of harmful habits that people acquire, one wonders that any of them are good looking at all.

A very common bad habit is that of biting off the thread while sewing, which injures the nerves of the teeth and is quite apt to cause them to die. The teeth to some extent "Wherever a tooth has been taken out, the hollow gum goes in and the face actually sinks in a little at this place. Hollows and wrinkles are bound to come."

Children acquire nervous habits of pulling or playing with the nose or ears. It does not matter so much if the ears are too large, for a woman can always cover them up with her hair, but a deformed nose spoils full face and profile.

The frowning habit is the commonest of all and the most stubbornly persisted in, although it is the easiest one to cure. Frowning brings on early wrinkles, spoils the forehead and often the eyes, and by unconsciously drawing down the mouth makes one look old and unhappy. Squinting the eyes is a bad habit which in a rather attractive when young, but which will induce all sorts of wrinkles around the eyes when one is older.

Sitting with the legs crossed is another bad habit because it unconsciously induces a slouchy position, a hollow chest and round shoulders.

BILLY WHISKERS

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

As Billy passed, he called out something that startled Fleet, for he had no idea Billy was following him. Fleet did the trainer, who thought it was Violet's doing, and that she had intended purposely to race him.

"Hoigh! Miss Tomboy, are you trying to beat me?" he called out. But Billy did not fear, for Billy was taking all her attention as he was jerking to get his head loose that he might run. She pulled back until her little hands opened and then she spoke to him.

"Very well, Billy, go ahead and beat her if you can. I'll give you my head."

When Billy heard this, he called back to Fleet:

"Come on, slow-poke, or I'll beat you."

At this Fleet pricked up her ears, took a square forward, and then for a while the great and colt ran neck-and-neck.

To be sure, Violet was getting the lot of her life, but she did not mind in fact, she rather enjoyed the excitement of it until her side began to ache and then she begged Billy to stop, but stop he could not, now that the spirit of the race was in his blood. He made up his mind that he would beat Fleet, even if he dropped dead at the finish.

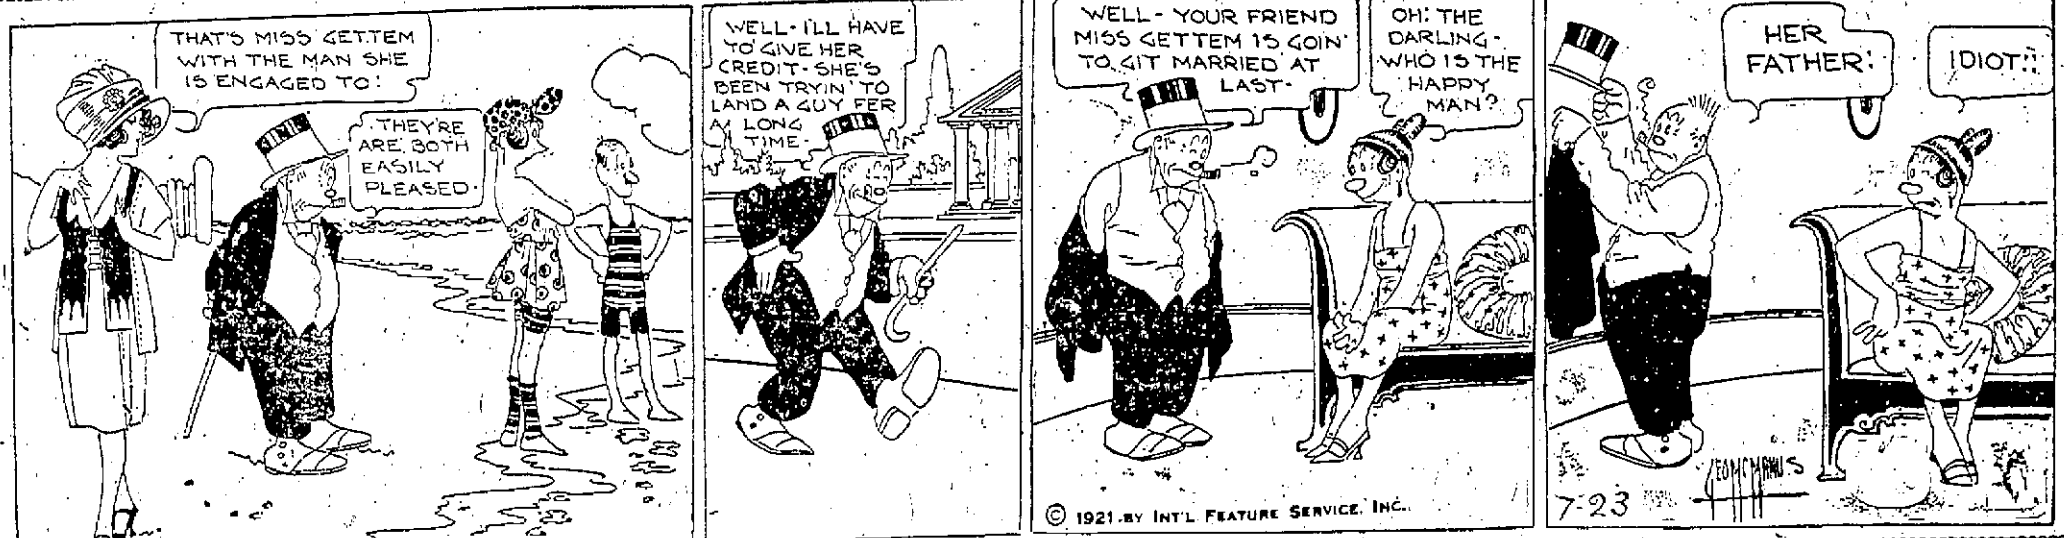

Fleet had stopped jolting long ago and was running for all she was worth, with a little frightened flutter at her heart for fear she was going to be beaten. Think of the mortification! To be beaten by the fleetest colt in all that part of the country.

When she thought of having the defeat told at the Social Club, she gathered herself together and did her best to keep Billy, but he still kept one ahead and seemed to be running easily and not at all short of breath, while she was gradually getting winded.

Fleet for the final spurt. Fleet. Let yourself out, my beauty, and don't be beaten by a goat."

She made one last effort and gained a pace or two, but this only brought her up even with Billy's head, and to save her life she could not gain a

WHEN A MAN'S MARRIED

Today's Short Story

By GEORGE T. BYE

Wellington Fields, Detective

From the moment of his appearance in the little bungalow at Asbury Park that had been the scene of the tragedy, Wellington Fields had claimed the hysterical widow of Antonio Palermo. It was usual that he gave confidence. Combined with his great stature, he had eyes that shone with infallibility, and there was an immensely about his movements that suggested nothing should hinder him.

Palermo had been a successful fruit merchant, so successful that he could afford this little one-story summer bungalow beside the sea of Asbury Park. He had spent his Saturdays with his family. The other days of the week found him early and late at Washington Market, New York City. He had been shot on Sunday morning, while his family was at mass. Two shots were heard by neighboring bungalow dwellers, but only one bullet took effect in Palermo's body. The other shot, a minute later, could not be traced.

The widow had told the police of a fight years ago in Genoa in which her husband had crippled a man who swore vengeance if it was the last act of his life. Her husband had said to her, "If you ever get to America, he and she would have to hide away, as Credato meant to kill them both. Now the Italian woman, with her native excitability, saw the eyes of the cruel assassin everywhere upon her, looking for the chance to fire the shot or drive home the dagger."

When Fields casually inquired at police headquarters if any trace of Credato had been found, he was told that New York, Jersey City, Newark, Trenton and Philadelphia reported no traces. Mrs. Palermo's cottage was surrounded and there was no chance

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I went with a boy for two years. His proposed several times, but as I felt that I could never love him, I refused to marry him. We are at an antagonistic religious. I let this fact influence me, as I think religious agreement is very necessary.

For two years he has lived in New York. I have corresponded as soon as friends. A year ago he told me that he was engaged to a girl there and I stopped our correspondence. Yesterday he wrote, speaking again of the love for me and vaguely stating that he did not love the other girl. Shall I correspond with him?

Write and say that you do not love him and because of religious difference you do not think it wise to try. Under the circumstances further correspondence would be unwise. It would merely keep him alive in his heart, while if he knows definitely that he cannot have you he will turn his interest in some other direction.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am the mother of three married children, two daughters and one son. My husband has been dead for seven years. Since his death I have made my home with my children, changing about so that no one would get weary of having me around.

It may sound strange, but I am happier with my son's wife than with either of my daughters. My son's wife is very sweet and she loves her husband so much that she includes anything that is in her love. I have a special room in their home and I am made to feel that at any time I am welcome and wanted.

One of my daughters is not happily married, and when I am with her I can see that I am only making it harder for her. Her husband does not like me and he is very irritable all the time that I am making my visit.

It is my other daughter who is my problem. I am sure that she loves me and when I am away from her she thinks she must have me with her. But when I get there she is very unkind in the way she treats me. She corrects my grammar and my table manners and she doesn't like my clothes, and by the time I have been with her a month I feel absolutely wretched.

My son and his wife are going away for three months. He is sent away on business and he is taking his family with him. I can stay at their home and be perfectly content, but my daughter with whom I cannot get along is very anxious to have me with her. She has had one of her rooms papered just so it will be prettier to know the truth and might make a sweeter woman of her. Probably when she gets older she will fall into many of the little habits for which she criticizes you now.

PLAN BIG WESTERN OCEANWAY HARBOR

Illinois and Indiana Working Out Details of Transfer Point.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Monday.—Plans for a great western terminus of the proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway to the sea, if built, will be worked out by a joint commission named by Illinois and Indiana. Estimates of both states have recently appropriated $25,000 each for the purpose.
Estimate of cost and recommendations are also included in the commission's report, which will be filed for presentation to the 1923 legislatures.
The project, called "Illiana Harbor," calls for a transfer harbor on Lake Michigan to the east of Chicago. It would be partly in Illinois and partly in Indiana. Besides such needs of Chicago as were not taken care of by its own harbor facilities, it would provide facilities for the great Calumet manufacturing district, bounded on the east by Gary, Ind.
It is proposed to make the harbor a terminus also for the Great Lakes waterway, connecting the Great Lakes with the Gulf. Interchange of freight between barge and rail, barge and ship, and ship and rail is contemplated.

Town Topics

There are fish stories and some more fish yarns. Alfred Riedel, local real estate man who has a cottage about a mile up the Rock river from the city limits, tells this one.
He caught a 12 pound catfish about three feet long in the shallow water near his place, looking at it lightly in the side and "netting" it with a towel. Not caring to clean it until morning, he placed it in a tank of water to keep it fresh over night.
Along about midnight, Mr. Riedel heard a racket and growling. Going to the tank, he found the fish gone. Having heard that some fish are able to jump out of water and flop down hill for 100 feet or so, he presumed that perhaps that was what had happened. In the morning, he found the head of the catfish several feet from the tank, all the rest of it apparently having been eaten.
What animal could have taken the fish from the tank and eaten it, he asks.

KEY FURNISHED TO TREASURE HOUSE

How Best Aid to Wonderful Information May Be Secured.

What vast and mighty treasures of words full of rich meaning are locked up in our language—hidden away from common use, and enjoyed only by the learned few. It is as if, possessing the mineral wealth of Mexico, mined, smelted and ready for the mint, we turned scornfully aside revelling in a voluntary poverty.
A dictionary constitutes the treasure house of a language. As a people we needlessly deprive ourselves of the help at our command. In our daily tasks, not one of which can be performed without the use of words, we possess only the most primitive tools, when we might be equipped with the keenest and most efficient. If the dictionary be the barred and bolted treasure house we have mentioned, then the coupon we print daily in this paper is its key.

The coupon will appear only a few more times. This marvelous distribution draws to a close. Readers are advised to consult the coupon now, read the display announcements and ascertain at once how this great New Universities Dictionary can be secured practically as a gift.

Brilliant Meteoric Shower for Middle of August The Stars for the Month

This month brings one of the finest of the annual meteoric showers, that of Perseids. They are most plentiful in the morning hours, but many will be seen throughout the night. The shower lasts from a week to ten days about the middle of the month.
The paths of these so-called shooting stars are plotted out on a map of the heavens and then continued backwards on the map in the direction from which they came. It will be found that all the paths come fairly close together in the constellation of Perseus. This common point is called the radiant, and showers are named according to the constellation by which their respective radiants lie. Thus we have also the Leonids, which come annually on November 15, and the Andromids, which appear on November 24.
Much misconception exists concerning these "shooting stars" and it can no doubt be traced directly to this popular name. In reality, they are not stars at all; no matter how many "shooting stars" are seen, all our old friends in the heavens are serenely shining in their accustomed places. They are simply tiny particles of matter for the greater part no larger than a small pea, which happen to come into contact with the earth's atmosphere. Whatever their origin may have been, they had been passing through space, following the all-compelling law of gravitation, just as any larger body would have to do.

Moving probably with great speed because of the absence of friction in "empty" space, they suddenly fall into the dense atmosphere, and heat generated by this sudden meeting raises the meteor and the neighboring air to luminosity and usually entirely consumes the former. Sometimes one of these bodies is large enough not to become entirely consumed, and reaching the earth's surface finds a final resting place in one of our museums. Many such specimens have thus found their way into captivity.

Comets contain both rocky and metallic material. Many of our terrestrial elements have been found in them and no substance which is unknown to us has as yet been discovered. Iron and nickel are the commonest metals in meteorites, but the presence of platinum has been definitely ascertained. The absence of elements not otherwise found in the earth's crust is interpreted in two possible ways. If the meteorites originated outside of the solar system it seems to indicate that the starchy world contains no elements which we do not possess and it argues for the general homogeneity of the universe; on the other hand, what is more likely is that it argues for an origin of the meteorites within the confines of the solar system.

We know the immediate origin of at least some of these wanderers of space. Years ago a comet whose return had been calculated for a certain time disappointed the astronomers, but in its stead there appeared a most liberal meteoric shower. It was immediately found by calculation, based upon the observed tracks of the meteorites, that the general mass of these particles occupied a path which very closely coincided with the orbit of the expected comet. No doubt, then, the meteorites were the particles of the disintegrated comet, and even up to the present these meteorites make their periodic appearance as luminous "shooting stars."

Many astronomers today favor the theory that the comets themselves originated within the solar system, affecting thus directly our notions of the origin of at least some of the meteorites; for we can not say with certainty that all meteorites are the debris of comets.

The Planets in August.
Only Uranus appears on our map this month, low down over the eastern horizon. Venus and Mars are moving stars, and will remain such the rest of the year; both may be observed before the sun makes its appearance over the eastern horizon in the morning.

Jupiter is still an evening star, but sets somewhat before midnight in the western sky during the early days of the month. The big planet will shortly change to a morning star, also, and is already getting fairly close to the sun. Saturn is close to Jupiter, slightly higher in the sky, but will become a morning star somewhat earlier because its eastward motion through the stars is slower, and the sun will more quickly catch up with it. Stretching from the horizon in the north to horizon in the south, through the highest parts of the sky, is the conspicuous, irregularly shaped band of stars called the Galaxy, or Milky Way. It makes a complete circle of the celestial sphere, though of course we can not see the whole of it at any one position on the earth. But the fact that it is a complete circle is important in trying to explain why there should be such a great collection of stars so much denser here than in any other

40-Foot Chute at Jackson Beach

Direction of the new chute which was recently built, from the fund appropriated by the council, was to begin Saturday afternoon at the South Jackson street bathing beach.
The chute is 40 feet in length and will be 12 feet from the water.

part of the heavens.

The rather generally accepted theory in explanation of this is that the universe of stars and cosmic matter occupies a space which is a flattened disk like a coin or book, or of some irregular outline. If the earth and the solar system are not far from the center of this disk-like space and we look out from the inside we would have a longer distance toward the edge than toward the upper and lower flat surfaces. Now, if the stars may be supposed to be spread out fairly uniformly throughout this space, we would actually see more stars when looking toward the edge than toward the upper and lower surfaces. So the astronomers believe that the Milky Way gives a clue to the shape of that part of space which our stars and the sun occupy.

Gas Economy Suggestions

To help our consumers save gas—which we feel to be just as much to our interest as theirs—we offer a few suggestions:

Use the small burner of your range instead of the giant burner whenever possible.

Have your food ready for cooking before you light the gas.

Before starting to bake or broil, have the oven heated for ten minutes.

Heating a kettle of water when you need only a small amount uses unnecessary gas and puts you to needless expense.

Do not keep a full flame on after water has reached the boiling point; turn the flame down, or place the kettle over the simmering burner, and the boiling process will go on with half or less than half the gas consumption.

Don't use the range oven for heating the kitchen or the house; devices made especially for heating are much more economical.

An old or worn-out range or other appliance, or one out of adjustment, will not operate with proper economy.

Consult us freely in regard to saving gas; we are always glad to co-operate with you.

Matteson Fights Guilbert for Wisconsin Golf Title

Local Man's Perfect Golf Defeats Champ Cavanagh; Granger Wins Age Contest

Kenosha.—D. A. Matteson, Janesville, and Gordon Guilbert, Racine, got away in the final match for the Wisconsin state golf championship on the links of the Kenosha country club just after 9 a. m. Saturday, with a great gallery of golfers following them. The match is over 36 holes and half of it will be played Saturday morning.

The tourney closes Saturday night with the award of medals and trophies.

It has been the most successful in the history of golf in Wisconsin since the first state meet was held in Janesville, 20 years ago. The 1922 tourney will be played on the links of the Milwaukee country club. The directors will meet within a month at the Blue Mound club in Milwaukee, to name new officers for the year.

Matteson Shows Speed
The speed shown by Matteson has been the feature of the tournament. He pulled the biggest of two of the greatest surprises that ever marked a Wisconsin golf tournament when he defeated State Champion Cavanagh of Kenosha Friday afternoon, coming through with colors flying. The Kenosha man, five times champion, not only was the ruling favorite before the match but few Janesville fans thought Matteson had a fighting chance.

Matteson's approaching was so accurate that he did not even have to use his putter. Experts began to notice his playing Thursday when he won the only overtime match of the tournament. They opened their eyes wider when, in his round with Gilbert Lane, Friday morning, Lane conceded six of the 18 holes when Matteson had approached to within a few inches of the cup.

The Surprise Score
Here's the score of Matteson's elimination of the state champion: Matteson—
Out ..... 3 4 4 5 4 3 2 4 5
In ..... 5 3 3 4 6 4 4 7
Cavanagh—
Out ..... 3 4 4 5 4 4 4 4
In ..... 3 4 4 3 3 4 5 5

The other surprise of the meet came when E. P. Granger of Milwaukee lost to Gordon Guilbert Friday afternoon. The match was not decided until the last hole and a long put by Granger had secured the match, but he missed, and the Beloit City had realized his ambition to take part in the final round.

Granger Wins Low
In the minor matches Friday, J. A. Granger of Janesville captured the low net score in the age limit handicap when he turned in a card of 70. Other Bower City men competing in this event were George E. King, 75; and Al Schaller, 76.
In the prestige sup. J. L. Wilcox of Janesville, 67, was first. H. Fleet, Bloomington, 3 up and 2. H. Rockwell, Beloit, was eliminated by A. B. C. Rosh, Sheboygan, 4 up and 2.
The following are the winners so far:

DIRECTORS' CUP MATCH
Noble Hale.
DRIVING CONTEST
Gordon Guilbert, Racine; E. Niemeyer, La Crosse.
APPROACHING AND PUTTING CONTEST
Ed. Hammett, Sheboygan; Gordon Guilbert, Racine; E. Niemeyer, La Crosse.

SPECIAL HANDICAP CONSOLATION EVENT
Low net score—Fred Robinson, Jr., Kenosha.
Low gross score—W. D. Martin, Jr., Kenosha.

AGE LIMIT HANDICAP
Low net score—A. L. Granger, Janesville.
Low gross score—Louis Allis, Milwaukee Country club.

The Hawks claim that they have first rights on the lot, having made arrangements with Charles Putnam, director of speed at the fair grounds. Sunday's game between the Rails and the Lake-Rites is the first of a series, which is to include the Club Billiards, to decide the city championship. It will be the first home game of the Hawks and the first Sunday game of the Lake-Rites for some time. It is reported that Owon, of the Rails is down to twirl for the Hawks while Fire is set to pitch for the Lake-Rites.

Madison Lad Looked Upon as Boxing Corner

Madison, off the boxing map of Wisconsin for a half dozen years until the mitt-slinging sport was revived a dozen months ago, has a promise of being a sensation in state ranks.

He is Jack "Kid" Monohan, 152-pounder, who has won his first five matches in brilliant fashion. His latest conquest was Gunner Dan, Chicago, middleweight, whom he annihilated in two rounds July 11 at Madison. The Gunner was floored three times and the effects of the knockout kept him in the land of dreams for 20 minutes.

Monohan, 21 years old, was born in Madison and has lived there all his life. He is a member of the crack cavalry unit of the national guard, the "Governor's Guards" of Madison.

Aggressive, Hard Hitter

He is an aggressive battler, with a tremendous wallop and he fights from the first bell with all his strength. He is clean-cut in his ring tactics and the biggest favorite ever applauded by a Madison audience. He stands far superior to any of his class in this city and is ready to step out into fast company.

In his first five fights he defeated Jimmy Brierty, Janesville, twice, Kid Love, Milwaukee, Young Leeward, Milwaukee and Gunner Dan, Chicago. He has never been extended has been developing so fast that the best boxing experts of Madison are enthusiastic over his chances for national ring fame.

Matteson Learned Golf Under Evans' Tutelage

By FRANK SINCLAIR.

How is it that D. A. Matteson has made such a wonderful showing at the Wisconsin state golf tournament at Kenosha in defeating "Dick" Cavanagh, five times Badger champion? This question was the talk of all golfers of Janesville Friday and even penetrated into many other circles.

The answer is found in the fact that Mr. Matteson is a protégé of the professional, As a member of the Edgewater country club of Chicago, Mr. Matteson has constantly played in a foursome with one of the men being Evans.

He is a close friend of the expert and has made a study of Evans' style endeavoring to copy it and reach his perfection. His form is pretty and perfect. Sport writers at the state tournament, after seeing him play his match with Cavanagh Friday, declared that his stroke was "better than perfect" and that he did not even have to use his putter on the approaches.

Mr. Matteson, who is senior partner in the Janesville firm of Matteson-Jensen, contractor and proprietor of "The Pines," has always been a notable figure when playing on the links of the Janesville country club. He has been a member of the Wisconsin Golf Association since 1910 and has won many prizes in local and state tournaments.

According to Charles L. Riley, local manager for Matteson's firm and himself somewhat of a golfer, stated Friday that Matteson, always plays better under pressure. The remark was passed before the news came over the wire that Matteson had eliminated Cavanagh and Riley said that if Matteson lived up to the rule, he would win.
Predictions were made here Saturday morning that Matteson has better than a fifty-fifty chance to come through and cop the title. It is a more finished player and more experienced than his opponent, Gordon Guilbert of Racine.

Last year Matteson played in the state tournament at Madison. However, he did not get much higher than the semi-finals, which at that time was considered quite a feat. Riley, Stanley Talkman and several other Janesville men motored to Kenosha Saturday morning to be on hand at the tourney when Matteson plays his last 18 holes of the championship.

CLUB TO MEET CRESCENTS SUNDAY

Reorganized, the Milton Junction Crescents are going to attempt to make up for an overwhelming defeat last Sunday at the hands of the Janesville Rails when they clash with the Club Billiards of this city at Charley Bluff, Lake Koshkonong, at 2:30 Sunday afternoon. Save for the defeat at the hands of the railroaders, the Crescents have had an almost unbeatable season. The Club outfit has also been going strong so that a fast battle is looming.

Harvard Meets Oxford on Track

Boston.—Track and field athletes of Harvard and Yale met Oxford and Cambridge, may break a deadlock in their international series when they clash at the Harvard Stadium Saturday.

The meet will be the fifth staged between the international rivals. Oxford and Cambridge won the first set of games held at the Queen's club, Kensington, England, in 1899, 5 events to 4, first places only counting. Harvard and Yale won the second meet, held at the famous Berkeley Oval in New York City, Sept. 25, 1901. The score was 6 events to 3. The Americans were victors in 1904 when they defeated the English collegians at the Queen's

Janesville Was After State Golf

While Milwaukee was awarded the 1922 state golf championship Saturday morning, Janesville had gone after it Friday night on the basis of the success of D. A. Matteson in winning his way into the finals for the championship. Telegrams were sent from here Friday afternoon by the Gazette and the Chamber of Commerce urging George E. King, president of the Janesville country club who is at Kenosha, to make a try for the meet.

This match together with the exhibition by the two Britishers July 30, will prove the greatest week-end of golf ever seen in this territory.

How 'Doug' Surprised 'Wife Mary' By Inviting Cow Punchers and Prize Fighters to Dinner

Copyright, 1921, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate and Hayden Talbot.

How do Mary and Doug live in their "Dream Castle"?

With a Husband who has an irrepressible sense of humor, Mary has often found herself facing a battered prize fighter or a lanky cowpuncher at the dinner table.

But they have one time they are at home that is wholly theirs—for no reason whatsoever will they give up their dinner together in the evening, when time and the "dream castle" is set aside for Mary and Doug.

Mary and Doug at rest. They are in front of the famous Pickford-Fairbanks home at Beverly Hills, to which they fly after their busy days of work.

"MY LIFE"

As Told By

MARY PICKFORD
To HAYDEN TALBOT

Ever since our marriage, said Mary, we have lived in a very simple manner. Douglas does not care for a huffy-burly sort of life, with one round of entertainment following another, nor do I.

So as a consequence we really live an extremely quiet existence at our house on the hill.

Of course, we are not recluses. We have our friends and we get a lot of real enjoyment out of entertaining them. But these entertainments are almost invariably informal.

Dinners that take on the nature of functions at our home are rare. But we do have them upon occasions. Usually this is when some personage is entertained or when some official, political or otherwise, comes to California from the East and is invited to spend an evening with us.

Like all happily married folks, our chief interest is in each other. In this respect I don't think we differ in the least from other happily married couples.

WE ARE both homeloving persons and our work and ambitions and tastes are similar. As a consequence this makes our life ideal.

Douglas, of course, is a lover of the out-of-doors. And our home is so situated that he can indulge his great liking to his heart's content.

Whenever opportunity presents he is off over the brush-clad hills that leap up in serried ranks behind the house, and with him go all his dogs, yelping with delight at the prospect of coyotes or rabbit chasing.

This sort of pastime, naturally, is too strenuous for me. But if the trip is to be made on horseback and not on foot, then I often join the party.

To me there is no sport more invigorating and exhilarating than dashing over hill and across gully on a swift, sure-footed horse. Aside from the sheer fun, there is also the exercise and the great benefit derived from breathing deeply of fresh, pure air. Nothing can be more healthful than this.

But our life is not one continuous round of pleasure, much as we would like it to be. Our work is to be considered. And there is probably no calling more exacting than ours—acting for the screen. Of course, in addition to appearing before the camera, Douglas and I manage our respective companies. Besides being players we are producers, which involves all the intricate procedure of presiding over extensive organizations.

The fact that we both market our plays through the United Artists Corporation makes it possible for us to transact much of our business jointly. The result of this is that our home is often our business office. Many of the most important conferences bearing on our work are held at the house.

For instance, practically all of the preparatory work in connection with my last picture, "Through the Back Door," was done at home. Conferences regarding wardrobe, sets and the story were held almost every day at the house up until the actual time photographing on the picture started. I might also add that almost everything pertaining to our new productions—"The Three Musketeers" for Douglas and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" for myself—is being supervised from the Beverly Hills place and not from the studio.

Two Kinds of Home Life

It might be said, I suppose, that we lead two kinds of home life. My reason for saying this is that when we are actually at work on a picture we live very differently from what we do when we are "between pictures," to use a phrase of the profession.

Let me illustrate this: During the time I was at work on "Through the Back Door" I was up every morning at seven and arrived at the studio at nine. You see, our home is seven miles from the studio, and in order to bathe and breakfast and dress properly, one must arise by seven at least in order to make this motor trip.

My breakfast when working is just as simple and frugal as when I am between pictures. It consists of either fruit and toast or just warm milk. I never drink coffee or tea because I have discovered that they do not agree with me.

When our pictures are in the course of making Douglas and I do not always eat breakfast together, the reason being that it is not always convenient to do so.

For example, if Douglas is going on a distant location, which is frequently the case, he is often up as early as 4 o'clock. And not infrequently it is I who must go on location.

When it is necessary for me to go away I travel in my "location car," a motor vehicle equipped for camping. This is built on the principle of a Pullman drawing-room, containing beds and necessary paraphernalia for preparing meals.

My maid always accompanies me and serves breakfast after we arrive

Douglas Fairbanks, in the panel at the left, as he looks when he's working out a new part, and Mary Pickford, below, as she looks when she's just doing nothing at our destination. Other meals, too, are prepared in the car. This convenience makes it possible for me to travel all night without undue fatigue if it so happens that we are going on a long trip into the mountains or the desert.

But to get back to our morning meal at home. This is always eaten in the breakfast room and never in the bedroom. There are no meals served in bed at our house! We think our breakfast room is one of the most cheerful and attractive rooms in the whole house, with its cream-colored furniture, bright flowers and lively canary, and the French windows that look out across the wide porch on to the mansion-studded mountains and wide, road-ribboned and house-dotted valley below.

Always Dine Together

Truly, the greatest of all actresses is Mother Nature. From these windows we view her in every mood. Sometimes she is whimsical, sometimes capricious, again she is rocked in the storms of anger—and on the broad screen below we see every phase, every change reflected.

Although it is not always possible for us to have breakfast together, we always make it a point to dine together. This is the one time when we are determined to see each other, and everyone in our respective organizations has instructions to arrange business affairs so that our evening meal can be partaken of at home and in peace.

Thus, when the day is done we forget all cares, all business or production worries until the evening repast has been served and cleared away. This is our one brief respite from all responsibility, the one opportunity to relax physically and mentally as well.

Our dinners are always varied. Douglas, of course, demands a man's meal. But with me it is somewhat different. All during the making of my last film I found it necessary to be very discriminating in the things I ate. In fact, the doctor put me on a diet of spinach and milk, the reason being that I suffered considerably from nervous indigestion.

But at home we follow neither rote nor diet at the table. By that I mean that because I am confined to a diet it does not follow that the entire family must suffer the effects of it. I inflict neither my doctrines nor do doctorings upon guests or household attaches.

Entertaining Doug's Friends

One of our greatest pleasures is entertaining our friends at dinner. Needless to say, most of our friends are people of the profession. This, of course, is because of the common ground upon which we stand.

Among the frequent diners at our home is Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin. There are others, too, but I think Mr. Chaplin comes most often. He is a delightful company and both Douglas and I enjoy his visits immensely.

And yet, as I think of it, I can hardly say that our guests are limited to any particular class. For Douglas, man-like, has a great habit of bringing home anyone he takes a fancy to.

Imagine my surprise one evening when I came down to dinner and discovered that Douglas had invited a number of prizefighters and wrestlers to be our guests. There they sat about the table with their cauliflower ears and battered noses, wondering what to do with the array of extra knives and forks that confronted them.

And another evening, when Douglas was entertaining, we had half a dozen cow-punchers—all lanky, ungainly fellows who knew much of silver saddle mountings, but little of silver table mountings.

Nevertheless they were all splendid, sterling fellows who would go to the ends of the earth for anyone they liked.

The reason I cite these two cases is just to show that when one's husband possesses an irrepressible sense of humor, there is no telling who the honored-guest for dinner will be.

When the meal is over, if we have been working that day, we usually see the "takes" for the day run off in our projection room. By the "takes" I mean the finished motion picture film that has come from the laboratory that day and that shows our latest work. Then, as both audience and critics, we sit in judgment on our work. And surely we have no more severe critics than ourselves.

If our own "takes" are not ready, or if we are not working, we then devote the evening to viewing one of the

Mr. Talbot's Comments on Mary at Home

As illustrating Miss Pickford's love of all her people, one of those queer twists of fate, or whatever it may be, brought to the surface with dramatic force the bigness of this little natural mother's love for her family.

For before she finished dictating the last sentence we both heard the sharp rat-a-tat-tat of an aeroplane's engine. It was not the low droning that comes down out of the air when a plane is at any great altitude. It was rather like the sudden ear-splitting assault of a racing motor car dashing by within a few feet.

Miss Pickford's face went suddenly white. She sprang to her feet and dashed out of the room without a word. Involuntarily I followed—although aeroplanes in Southern California are as common these days as automobiles.

On the lawn of her bungalow Miss Pickford stood gazing up at the machine that was coming like a whirlwind straight toward the little building—and not more than one hundred feet elevation! It was a very sportily painted affair and with racy lines. And it was only the pilot! Within a half dozen seconds the plane crossed directly over our heads, and shooting suddenly skyward, just cleared the roof of a big glass stage beyond.

I looked at Miss Pickford as I heard a half suppressed sob. Tears were streaming down her face. Her body was shaken with a veritable paroxysm of agony. Suddenly she clenched her hands and held her arms up in the direction in which the plane had disappeared.

"Oh Jack, oh Jack," she sobbed, "you promised you wouldn't. Then she turned and ran into the bungalow and threw herself on the couch in her dressing room, crying her heart out.

A member of the Pickford organization had seen it all—and now turned to me with a wry smile and an explanation.

"It's her brother," he said shortly. "He's gone daffy over flying, and the other day got this pilot's license. That's his own machine. He just bought it and he told Miss Pickford to call on both of them today—sharing the roofs of the bungalow and the Pickford home. I suppose he's off to repeat this stunt for his mother's benefit now. And the point is that he promised Miss Pickford that he wouldn't come near this lot."
